Hannah supports attorneys and litigation consultants to analyze potential juries and study communities across the country.

As a project manager, Hannah effectively guides multiple stakeholders through designing, researching, and analyzing data around jury- eligible individuals and geographic areas where they live and work. She works with litigators, consultants, graphics professionals, and respondents to collect, analyze, and report on preferences and behavioral leanings. Attorneys rely on the results of her data analysis to strategically prepare for all phases of litigation, particularly voir dire.

Between jury selection and closing arguments, Hannah works as a seamless member of the litigation team to guide attorneys and consultants through research conducted online and in person.
